Members of the Liberation Support Coalition, which supports national liberation struggles throughout the world, pass out literature at Oregon State University Thursday protesting job recruiting on campus by the Central Intelligence Agency. The literature said, "No job in the CIA is just a job. If you work for the CIA in any capacity, you cast your lot with one of the most reprehensible agents of U.S. political and corporate power." About a dozen students interviewed for CIA jobs that ranged in yearly pay from $13,014 to $32,442, according to officials in the campus careers planning and placement office at OSU.
